THE FLU AND YOU

It's been especially bad for the young this year

Chicago Tribune

This flu season was particularly hard on relatively young patients across the U.S., the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention announced Thursday.

The CDC's early estimates fulfill the predictions by public health experts who said this season's re-emergence of the H1N1 flu strain—responsible for a 2009 pandemic—would target younger patients the same way it did several years ago.

Patients between the ages of 18 and 64 years old represented more than 60 percent of all hospitalizations from influenza. This is more than the previous three flu seasons, the CDC said, when the age group composed roughly 35 percent of hospitalized patients.

Plus, patients who were 25 years to 64 years old have accounted for about 60 percent of flu deaths this season, the CDC said. That's compared to 18 percent, 30 percent and 47 percent for the three previous seasons.

"Younger people may feel that influenza is not a threat to them, but this season underscores that flu can be a serious disease for anyone," said Dr. Tom Frieden, the CDC's director, in a statement.

The government agency's findings were published in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report and addressed today in a conference call with federal health officials.

The H1N1 virus accounted for 98 percent of influenza viruses detected, the weekly report said. The H1N1 subtype has sickened patients since its emergence, but the CDC said this season was the first time the virus has been predominant in the U.S. since the pandemic.

THE SITUATION IN CHICAGO

Chicago's public health department reported 154 flu-related intensive care unit hospitalizations between the end of September 2013 and early February.

43 PERCENT

The percentage of those patients who were younger than 50 years old, according to city flu reports

46 PERCENT

The percentage of those ICU patients who tested positive for H1N1

72%

During the 2009-10 flu season, when H1N1 swept across the Chicago area, 72 percent of flu-related intensive care unit admissions were for patients age 49 or younger.

1/3

Nearly a third of all such admissions involved patients no older than 18. By contrast, according to city data, 75 percent of last flu season's ICU patients were age 50 or older.

Second thoughts on sex and apps

Jen Kim

Meet Glance, a brand-new app coming soon to a sex-app store near you. The $1,500 Google Glass experience is hitting the sheets, making you a sort-of boudoir Seinfeld. Bam chicka bam bam.

Have you ever wanted to have sex with Glass? Probably not. Yet students in London apparently did, which is why they created an app that allows you to see what your partner is seeing during sexy time—and presumably non-sexy time.

Oh, yes, you get to capture every angle, every weird nook and cranny. And, BONUS, it also conveniently records everything into a homemade porno in case you want to take notes or invite friends over for dinner and a movie.

It goes without saying that this app is a bad idea. And to prove it, I've written a few imaginary conversations detailing what could (and probably will) go horribly wrong if you invite Glass into the various stages of coitus. JEN KIM IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Foreplay

Man: Hey, babe. Want to have sex while wearing Google Glass?

Woman: What the what? Why?

Man: So we can see each other doing it.

Woman: So you're saying that you'd rather watch yourself having sex with me than watch me?

Man: Um ... not exactly.

Woman: Um ... yes, exactly. That is both disgusting and narcissistic. We're over.

Intercourse

Man: "Out of breath" Hey, babe. You like this?

Woman: Yeah, babe. This is great. I love seeing ... WHAT THE [BLEEP]?

Man: What happened? You OK?

Woman: There's something on my back. Like a growth. What the heck is that?

Man: Don't stop. It's nothing. I mean, it's always been there.

Woman: What do you mean it's always been there? Since when? This could be cancer.

Man: Babe, please don't stop. Don't do this.

Woman: I'm going to the hospital. We're over.

Post coitus

Man: Wow, this is so hot. Our very own sex tape.

Woman: Umm. Why is all the footage only of you?

Man: I dunno—I guess, cuz you were looking at me.

Woman: Yeah, but weren't you looking at me?

Man: Of course I was.

Woman: Then shouldn't I be in it a little? I'm like an extra in this thing.

Man: Babe. Relax. So what, I checked myself out a little.

Woman: We're over.

OK, I was skeptical for many reasons, the first of which being that I'm pretty sure one sent to me personally was made up (look at the feed if you want to know what it says). But secondly, it's not really all that anonymous. If you really want to figure out who sent you the message, you can look through the account's follow list for a familiar face. @ChicagoAdmirers would have to be following the person for him or her to send DM. ## SNOWBALL CHARGE

Accused of hitting cop, 13-year-old slapped with felony charge

Chicago Tribune

A 13-year-old boy arrested for allegedly hitting a Chicago police officer with a snowball says he was wrongly picked out of a crowd of kids walking home from school.

And besides, he adds, the snowball didn't even hit the cop.

"It made me mad," said the eighth-grader, who is facing a felony charge of battery to a police officer. "He [the officer] said the snowball hit him, but it hit the car, not him."

The incident occurred around 3:30 p.m. Wednesday in the 4900 block of West Congress Parkway, about a half a block from where the boy attends school, according to a police report.

The officer reported that the boy threw a snowball and hit him in the arm while he sat in a marked squad car.

The boy was taken into custody and charged as a juvenile with aggravated battery to a peace officer, a felony. The Tribune is not naming him because he is a minor.

The eighth grader said he had just gotten out of school and was standing with about 15 classmates when someone else threw the snowball. The school's dean and a security guard were stationed nearby and singled him out.

"He kept trying to tell the officer that he didn't do it, but they didn't believe him," the boy's mother said. "He was standing on the corner, there was a whole crowd of kids. It's so crazy."

The mother said she got a phone call from the officer. "He got on the phone and was saying [her son] threw a snowball at the car and the officer was in the car," the mother said.

"It's sad, he's only 13. I'm so upset, he's never been in trouble before," she said. "It's his first case."

Jordan suit over Jewel ad revived

Chicago Tribune

A federal appeals court has breathed new life into Michael Jordan's legal battle with Jewel-Osco over a congratulatory ad it ran when he was inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame in 2009.

The ad, which appeared in a Sports Illustrated issue commemorating Jordan's induction, featured a pair of basketball shoes with the number 23 on them below the words "Jewel-Osco salutes #23 on his many accomplishments as we honor a fellow Chicagoan who was 'just around the corner' for so many years."

Also displayed in the ad were the Jewel-Osco logo and the grocery chain's slogan, "Good things are just around the corner."

After the ad ran, Jordan filed a $5 million lawsuit against Jewel. He also sued Dominick's, which also ran a congratulatory ad in the issue, calling Jordan "a cut above" near a coupon for steak.

In 2012, a federal judge found that the Jewel ad was "noncommercial speech" protected by the First Amendment.

But a 7th Circuit appeals court reversed that ruling Wednesday, allowing the case to move forward. "Based on its content and context, the ad is properly classified as a form of image advertising aimed at promoting the Jewel-Osco brand," the court wrote.

Jordan's lawsuit against Dominick's is pending, with a trial expected later this year on damages after U.S. District Judge Milton Shadur found the grocery chain was liable.

Protesters advance to new positions in Kiev, Ukraine, on Thursday after renewed violence shattered an hours-old truce with the government. GETTY IMAGES

EU seeks Ukraine peace after death toll hits 75

European Union ministers sought to broker a political settlement in Ukraine after gun battles between police and anti-government protesters brought the death toll to 75 in two days of the worst violence in the country since Soviet times.

Three hours of fierce fighting in Kiev's Independence Square, which was recaptured by the protesters, left the bodies of over 20 civilians strewn on the ground, a short distance from where President Viktor Yanukovych was meeting the EU delegation.

The ministers, from Germany, France and Poland, embarked on "a night of difficult negotiations" with Yanukovych and the opposition, said EU officials who hoped a plan for an interim government and early elections could bring peace.

France's foreign minister said there was still no agreement over a proposed road map to ease the crisis, which erupted in November after Yanukovych abandoned a proposed trade deal with the European Union and turned instead towards Moscow.

"There is no agreement for now, the negotiations are very difficult and we are working to reach a peaceful solution," France's Laurent Fabius told reporters.

The three ministers, who extended their stay in Kiev until Friday, have been negotiating with the government and opposition since Thursday morning.

Earlier in the day, riot police were captured on video shooting from a rooftop at demonstrators in the central plaza, known as the Maidan. Protesters hurled petrol bombs and paving stones to drive the security forces off a corner of the square the police had captured in battles that began two days earlier.

The health ministry said 75 people had been killed since Tuesday afternoon, which meant at least 47 died in Thursday's clashes. That was by far the worst violence since Ukraine emerged from the crumbling Soviet Union 22 years ago.

Olympics-bound?

Ice cross downhill has legs—now it needs momentum

By Emily Brown | REDEYE

Four skaters line up next to each other. Once the gates open, it's a slippery free-for-all.

The skaters race down the 45-degree start ramp, trying to find an edge. They hustle up hills and swing around banked turns. Drops and big-air jumps invade their path, yet they still jockey for position. Some wipe out, while others reach speeds of 40 mph along the 430-meter course.

Welcome to Red Bull Crashed Ice, aka the Ice Cross Downhill World Championship. Athletes from all over the world, including two from the Chicago area, will gather in St. Paul, Minn., this week to compete in one leg of the sport, which combines hockey and downhill skiing.

If you've seen snowboard or ski cross at the Sochi Olympics, that will paint a good picture of what this combination of hockey and downhill skiing is about. Now imagine that on ice, with skaters in full hockey gear, and you're on the right track.

"Within 10 years I think it will be an Olympic event," Logan Square resident Pete Majkozak said. "These are topnotch guys, world-class athletes."

Majkozak, 27, will compete in the St. Paul Crashed Ice race for the second straight year. Also in the mix is 27-year-old Christian Grunnah of Evanston, competing for the first time.

Majkozak played hockey at Iowa State and later overseas. He currently plays in a recreational league when he isn't at his day job at Coyote Logistics.

Grunnah went to college to play hockey but ended up spending more time in theater. A year and a half ago, he moved to Evanston with his wife and now coaches three hockey teams while auditioning for commercials.

Both athletes gave RedEye a glimpse of what makes ice cross downhill a potential game-changer.

ENBROWN@TRIBUNE.COM | @EMILY_BROWN88

DANGEROUS

With six turns, a 40-meter drop, obstacles and three other skaters racing to beat you, crashes are practically inevitable.

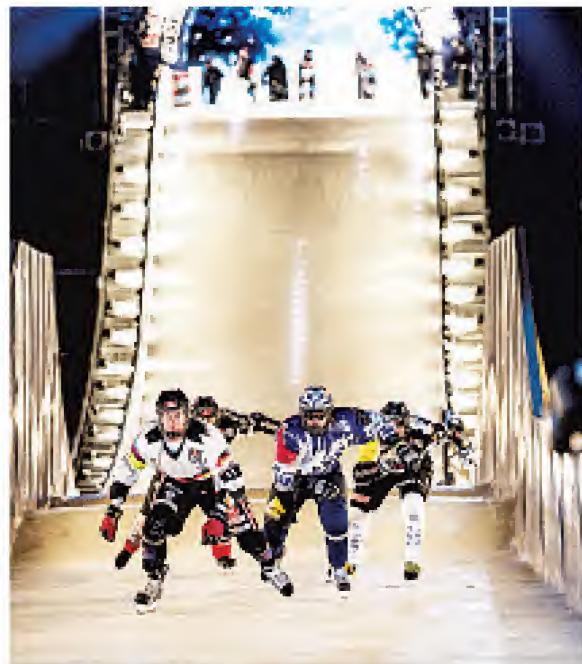

"I saw a couple bad injuries last year," Majkozak said. "I saw a guy who didn't clear a double jump and blew out his knee. It's an eye opener. You try to go as fast as you can. It's a tough course with a lot of jumps. You try to stay vertical."

CRASHED ICE CRASH COURSE

RedEye breaks down how athletes reach the Ice Cross Downhill World Championship and what's at stake on the four-stop circuit at redeyechicago.com/sports.

BRO-TASTIC

Despite the competitive nature of the sport, a lot of the skaters cheer on one another behind the scenes.

"I stayed in touch with a lot of the competitors from last year," Majkozak said. "We were in the same hotel, and I was around them a lot. We're all super supportive and encouraging everyone else."

"I've wanted to do it for so long, I just never heard how to get involved," Grunnah said. "This year I researched a bit more."

There are dangers in ice cross downhill, but Grunnah isn't worried about those. Instead, he thrives on the rush.

"It's exciting," he said. "My dad also was a race car driver and I drove race cars myself. We're adrenaline junkies. I skied as a kid when I lived in Colorado for a time. I was one of those kids that tried stuff... I always wanted to go fast."

» Fire waive forward Kellen Gulley, midfielder Brendan King

RED BULL CRASHED ICE

8:30 p.m. Monday, Fox Sports 1

ADDICTIVE

Majkozak first heard about the event across the Atlantic Ocean.

"I was playing hockey in Belgium at the time," Majkozak said. "[Red Bull Crashed Ice] had an event in the Netherlands, which is very close. I fell in love with it."

His love for the sport soon turned to addiction after he qualified in 2013.

And after the St. Paul event last year, Majkozak convinced himself it was too demanding to repeat in 2014. At least temporarily.

"It's physically demanding," he said. "Last year after the competition, I said I was done. I said, 'I'm never doing it again.' But on the plane back I was like, 'No, it was a blast, I'm doing it again.'"

3	The latest Bulls-Heat matchup on Sunday will be ...	... compared to other matchups, unHeat-a-Bull.	... the NBA is still going on? Huh.	... another epic beating at the hands of the best player on the planet.	... epic. Epic. Can't wait to read about it on Monday.	@JetSetVegas ... sucktacular!
4	How are the Fire preparing for their upcoming season?	Suing a certain TV show over naming rights. Jesse Spencer was less than I expected at striker.	The Fire have an upcoming season? Huh.	By telling everyone they cannot get Taylor Kinney's autograph.	Looking at film. "Bend it Like Beckham" was on the other day.	@AndrewCieslak Trying to figure out what Bridgeview is.
5	Tom Ricketts envisions a Cubs playoff appearance this season. Discuss.	First Clark, now this. What more evidence do you need that the man is not well?	The Cubs are allowed to make the playoffs? Huh.	Ricketts has been drinking the water in Sochi.	Two things: 1) What drug(s) is he on? 2) Where can I get some?	@zodiacjs It's possible if the Cubs sign Kim Jong Un, who North Korean media says hit .480 w/ 84 homers last year.

COLD RUSH

Each day during the Sochi Olympics, we'll share what's giving us chills—good or bad.

Taking a step back

In a humbling reminder of what really matters in life, one Ukrainian athlete has withdrawn from competition in protest of the political violence taking place in her country. Skier Bogdana Matsotska will not participate in the slalom—her best event—on Friday.

"I don't want to participate when in my country people die," the 24-year-old told The Associated Press on Thursday.

Matsotska was hoping to join protesters in the camp known as Maidan in Kiev's Independence Square but said she had been unable to book a flight home.

Second to Canada. Again.

The U.S. women's hockey team led 2-0 with less than four minutes left in the gold medal game Thursday. And then it all slipped away. The Canadians won 3-2 in overtime on a power-play goal, giving their country four straight Olympic gold medals.

"We didn't train for a silver, we trained for a gold medal," Buffalo Grove's Megan Bozek said as she wiped tears from her eyes.

Badass granddaughter

It's not often that a champion athlete is overshadowed by a relative. But that might be the case for U.S. freestyle skier Maddie Bowman. Bowman won the women's ski halfpipe Thursday, and waiting to celebrate with her was her grandmother, Lorna Perpall. Written on Lorna's T-shirt: Bad Ass Grandma.

"I had a dream about nine months ago and it just Maddie got gold," Perpall said. "I thought, 'Well, that's my wishful thinking.'

Maddie was the one that gave me the name. She was being interviewed on a public radio station. The interviewer said, 'It sounds like you and your grandmother are very close.' And Maddie said, 'Oh yeah. She's one badass Grandma.'

Double or nothing?

President Obama and Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper have put both national pride and cases of beer on the line in a friendly wager on the Canada-U.S. Olympic hockey games.

Well ... Obama is already down a case after the Canadian women beat the Americans on Thursday.

"For a very brief period of time, I may not feel as warm towards Canadians as I normally do, at least until those matches are over," Obama quipped to Harper during a leaders' summit in Mexico on Wednesday.

A speedskater's perfect 10

Glenview's Brian Hansen, a two-time Olympic speedskater, finally tracked down all 10 Olympic Blackhawks.

Hansen tweeted around 11:30 a.m. Thursday: "BOOM! @88PKane! Met all 10 @NHL Blackhawks here at the Olympics! Do they give out medals for this?"

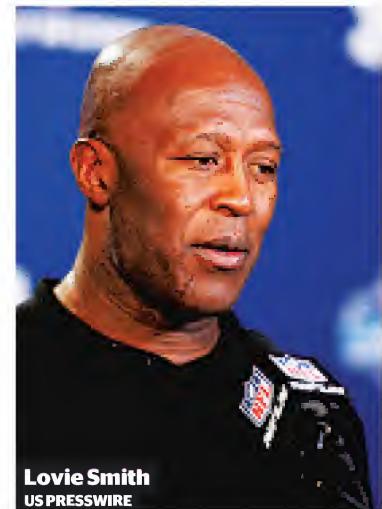

It took a few days to track down Patrick Kane, even though they're staying in the same building.

On Monday afternoon, Hansen joked, "I'm going to go looking for him at the USA House at the bar."

Hansen already knows a few Hawks personally but admitted he had to look up a couple to remember who they were.

But the process is always pretty simple: "I go up and say, 'Hey, I'm Brian I'm from Chicago. I'm a long-track speedskater, huge fan of you guys. Is there any way I can take my picture with you?'"

MEAT YOUR MATCH

What three new barbecue restaurants do—and don't—have in common

By Lisa Arnett | REDEYE

As if on a mission to save us from the deep freeze, three new barbecue restaurants have fired up their smokers this winter. They're all stocked with enough coleslaw and spicy sauce to make you feel like you're on a summer picnic—and none are 100 percent loyal to any one particular regional style.

Ravenswood Q dubs itself a Texas-style barbecue joint with influences ranging from St. Louis to the Carolinas. Q-BBQ in Lakeview, the first city location of a successful suburban restaurant with locations in LaGrange and Naperville, dabbles in everything from Carolina-style pulled pork to Memphis-style baby back ribs. Green Street Smoked Meats, the latest hangout from Brendan Sodikoff's Hogsalt (Gilt Bar, Maude's Liquor Bar, Au Cheval and more), would rather not be boxed in. "I'm from Texas, so personally, I lean toward that kind of stuff ... [but] I definitely don't want to put any kind of boundaries on what we're going to do," culinary director Jason Vaughan said. "Honestly, I might want to do Korean-style pork shoulder one day, or Chinese-style barbecue ribs ... I think what's good is good and we're just going to try to do the best that we can."

We gave all three the Venn diagram test to see what they do—and don't—have in common.

This elegant two-floor cocktail bar and restaurant opened earlier this month in River North. Look for approachable cocktails ($10-$13) at the first-floor bar, while more complex drinks and a full dinner menu await upstairs in the glam, 1920s-inspired Deco Room. Read our full review at redeyechicago.com/celeste.

This Italian restaurant in Streeterville recently expanded its pizza offerings to include new topping combos (think fried eggplant, mozzarella, black olives and crispy capers) as well as an option for gluten-free crust.

Bottlefork's po' boy

Bottlefork Bar and Kitchen

447 N. Clark St. 312-955-1900

The former Dragon Ranch Moonshine & BBQ space in River North has been replaced by Flockit Ranch Productions' latest venture with former Allium chef Kevin Hickey heading up the kitchen. Expect to see Hickey's own interpretations of po' boy (topped with braised beef cheek), Scotch eggs (made with bratwurst) and the classic po' boy (made significantly richer with the addition of foie gras). And if the name doesn't clue you in to the fact that what's in your glass is just as important as what's on your plate, the lengthy beer, wine and cocktail menu will.

Charcoal Bar

702 N. Wells St. 312-988-7864

Head to the sleek gray basement below Sumi Robata Bar to find this teeny, tucked-away cocktail spot helmed by bartender Michael Simon (previously of Carriage House and Acadia). Cocktails on the five-drink menu aren't cheap at $14-$20, but the hand-sawed ice cubes and silver stemware make them feel special enough to justify the price tag.

Ranalli's

1925 N. Lincoln Ave. 312-642-4700

This well-known Lincoln Park pizzeria recently got a revamp from Four Corners Tavern Group, the folks that brought you reliable neighborhood hangouts such as Benchmark, Schoolyard and WestEnd, just to name a few. Fresh touches include new TVs, wine on tap and a 12-person booth with beer taps built into the table.

Thanks to author Pliny the Younger, there actually exists a first-hand account of Mount Vesuvius' catastrophic, Pompeii-destroying eruption in A.D. 79. Because it comes from the director of "Resident Evil" and shouldn't be a top priority for people who care about "facts," "Pompeii" opens not by citing a vivid, haunting description, but with Pliny noting audible shrieks and shouts during the mayhem. Since we otherwise would've assumed people would treat deadly, flying boulders of fire with a whisper and a shrug.

Then the film captures a specific event in world history by fashioning it into a generic, revenge-focused blend of "Gladiator" and "Titanic." Mistakenly thinking only his muscles need to deliver some muscle, a dull Kit Harington ("Game of Thrones") plays a man who as a child witnessed his parents' slaughter as Romans razed his entire Celtic village. Now people know him only as Celts, a surprise since this warrior so clearly wants people to call him Abs McGee.

A horse whisperer with impressively well-kept facial hair, Celts catches the eye of Cassia (Emily Browning), daughter of official Pompeii fundraising chair Severus (Jared Harris of "Mad Men"). This bugs Roman senator Corvus (Kiefer Sutherland, not remotely intimidating), a big fan of shouting, "Kill them! Kill them all!" as he totally saw her first. Sadly, among these traditional names there's no one called Tedious, who would best understand the DOA drama of all this petty jealousy and puppy love.

There's also no continuity in the accents or anything but English spoken, which seems about as precise as shooting much of the film in Toronto. The bloodless sword fights, mostly of the clang-grunt-slash variety, are blandly staged and terribly shot. Half the time you can't see what's going on, and the other half you wish you couldn't. Every so often we see bubbling lava or hear the mountain rumbling — just in case anyone wonders whether the thing will actually explode.

A mind-blowing finale might have redeemed all that (speaking of "Titanic"), but the briefly impressive main event in "Pompeii" mostly inspires, "Wow, that really looks like special effects." And while I realize "Those who are about to die salute you" (also incorporated in "Gladiator") comes from a real Latin phrase, "Pompeii" tweaking it to, "For those of us about to die, we salute you!" just reminded me of "For Those About to Rock (We Salute You)," a classic by the international conquerors of ACUs/DCUs.

Thor: The Dark World
Having spun a series of blockbuster individual superhero movies into the mega-hit "The Avengers," Marvel has begun following those heroes back into their own adventures. "Iron Man 3" came out last year, and the next "Captain America" is due soon; in between, Marvel released "Thor: The Dark World." The hunky Chris Hemsworth reprises his role as the Norse god; Natalie Portman returns as his mortal love interest, Dr. Jane Foster; and Tom Hiddleston plays the malevolent trickster Loki. This sequel is darker and heavier than the first "Thor" film, in large part because it takes place mostly in the mythic realms of Asgard. But Hemsworth and Hiddleston do a lot to keep the story grounded.

Blue Is the Warmest Color

For all the controversy over the explicit sex in writer-director Abdellatif Kechiche's three-hour adaptation of Julie Maroh's graphic novel "Blue Is the Warmest Color," the film ultimately is just a sensitive and honest coming-of-age story. It shows how a teenager discovers who she is with the help of her older lesbian girlfriend, then has to find herself again when they drift apart. Adele Exarchopoulos and Lea Seydoux are terrific as the young ladies who don't have much in common beyond their mutual attraction but whose intense affair leaves them—and the viewer—a little wiser.

Sandra Bullock in "Gravity"

Nebraska

Director Alexander Payne and screenwriter Bob Nelson's best picture nominee starts as a dry, quirky indie comedy, with Bruce Dern playing a senile old coot named Woody who demands that his son David (Will Forte) drive him to Lincoln, Neb., to pick up the sweepstakes prize he's convinced he's won. But once the story detours into Woody's old hometown—and begins dealing with the resentment and pain he left behind years ago—"Nebraska" deepens into a heartbreak story of one man toward the end of his life looking back at the wreckage he's left in his wake. The Oscar-nominated June Squibb gives a funny and sweet performance as Woody's wife, who puts everything in perspective.

EXTRAS A few featurettes

Gravity

Not just a dazzling special effects spectacle—though it is undoubtedly that—Alfonso Cuarón's best picture nominee also is a potent spiritual allegory about a woman adrift in outer space, suddenly aware of how desperately she wants literally and figuratively to return to Earth. Sandra Bullock is outstanding as Dr. Ryan Stone, a scientist who signs on to a space shuttle mission and then lives through a horrific disaster, with only veteran astronaut Matt Kowalski (George Clooney) to guide her. "Gravity" moves from one nail-biting sequence to the next, each masterfully plotted and executed, but it is Stone's metaphorical rebirth that makes the film not just exciting but also beautiful.

EXTRAS An impressive batch of tech-focused featurettes, plus a companion short film by Cuarón's son Jonas, who co-wrote "Gravity" beautiful dreams" and engineers turn dreams to reality, any viewer not totally married to his or her career may drop everything to follow a new path. In the gorgeously animated "The Wind Rises," flight is a glorious innovation, and the movement of ideas from paper to sky and machines through the air is simply transporting.

How disappointing, then, that the film, reportedly the last for legendary writer/director Hayao Miyazaki ("Spirited Away"), resists greatness and often, even goodness. The story is based on the life of Horikoshi, an actual designer of Japanese WWII fighter planes. At first, "The Wind Rises" makes dazzling use of the boy's dreams—his imagination lets him watch massive planes soar and even stand on their wings. His determination years later to become an engineer, since he believed his nearsightedness prevented him from being a pilot, may not be a particularly sexy plot development, but it's a case of someone doing the work to fulfill a goal.

The Wind Rises

Yet whenever the wonderful animation isn't substituting for a compelling story, "The Wind Rises" is just so dry. A mild love story and bout with disease have little depth, and the film leaps over large gaps in time only to intently focus on monotonous developments in Jiro's work life. It reminded me of "Gravity" in that I loved looking at it, but had no interest in listening along.

Still, there's no question that "The Wind Rises" rises above a very underwhelming crop of recent animated efforts (excluding the 4-star "The Lego Movie," of course), and it's a tad better than the clump of blah efforts

'The Wind Rises'

Miyazaki's delivered in recent years (the massively overrated, weird "Ponyo"). At times, "Wind" feels delightfully old-fashioned, almost classic. If only it fulfilled that promise.

NOTE: MATT REVIEWED THE FILM BASED ON ITS JAPANESE-LANGUAGE, SUBTITLED VERSION HE RECEIVED FOR CHICAGO FILM CRITICS ASSOCIATION AWARDS CONSIDERATION.

A crash course on female musicians in jazz, "The Girls in the Band" packs in so many stories and performances that I wished it would slow down so the music could settle and the anecdotes could breathe.

That said, a high quantity of revolutionary people and concerts is a good problem in a documentary about barrier-busting musicians. Director/co-writer Judy Chaikin speaks to many of these women, including members of late-'30s/early-'40s ensemble the International Sweethearts of Rhythm and their "trumpetiste" Clora Bryant. Countless snippets of archival footage include shameful examples of sexism including a letter to the editor that female musicians "should stick to their ironing" and a TV host introducing Chicago native Ina Ray Hutton as "that pretty little spitfire of syncopation." Anyone familiar with mid-20th century America will be unsurprised but sickened by such misogynistic behavior, as well as by tales of racism encountered while touring in Southern states.

The Girls in the Band

Despite its content pile-up, "The Girls in the Band" undeniably achieves its primary purpose of making viewers walk out of the theater knowing a lot more about the subject than when they entered. Did you know that Patrice Rushen (the early-'80s single "Forget Me Nots," sampled for "Men in Black") is a successful jazz pianist? Or that Louis Armstrong's former wife Lil Hardin Armstrong died during a performance honoring her ex? The notion of women getting different professional opportunities during WWII and the film's climactic reunion of many of its subjects recalls "A League of Their Own," but Chaikin is careful to look at the present and note how many women are stars in the jazz world. "This is not a man's game," Grammy-winning singer/bassist Esperanza Spalding says. "We are creators." Amen to that.

Reasons not to marry your cousin

FAST PAISSED

Matt Pais

» mpais.tribune.com
» @mattpais

You can't blame Therese (Elizabeth Olsen) for feeling some lusty impatience. She's spent the bulk of her life cooped up with her repressive aunt (Jessica Lange) and cousin Camille (Tom Felton), and even after she's forced to marry Camille, he has minimal sexual interest in her. Not that he's a catch or anything: This guy's needy, awkward, sweaty, constantly sick and even more annoying than Felton's Draco Malfoy in the "Harry Potter" movies.

So when Camille's old pal Laurent (Oscar Isaac of "Inside Llewyn Davis") turns up in Paris, it's not long before he and his friend's wife are doin' it and doin' it and doin' it well. The heat and eroticism between Laurent and Therese is desire consummated hungrily, and their need to steal away sexy time only increases the breathlessness of their passion. There's just the matter of Camille, a nuisance who seeks to bring Therese back to rural France, where he thought she was easier to keep happy.

What follows is a relationship that tumbles into chaos and a movie that follows suit. Imaginary video stores are filled with shelves and shelves of characters' brilliant, dastardly plans that ultimately go awry, and writer-director Charlie Stratton (adapting Emile Zola's 1867 novel "Therese Raquin") overdoes his efforts to depict numerous kinds of drowning. While Olsen's face reveals her character's rising guilt (which isn't exactly a turn-on), Isaac at times struggles to stay in the moment—and the film's already playing loose and fast with reality, with nothing but English being spoken in 19th century France.

I'm not a doctor, but it's a bit surprising there's little talk of pregnancy with all this unprotected action going on. It's also disappointing the way the Hitchcock-meets-Shakespeare "In Secret" requires reckless shouting and convenient health issues in order to keep its plot going. As Therese and Laurent learn, excitement doesn't always last, but "In Secret" should have kept it going a bit longer.

'Stranger by the Lake'

Revealing the naked truth

FAST PAISED

Matt Pais

Set at a clothing-optional beach where gay men cruise for sexual partners, the French thriller "Stranger By the Lake" contains many dangling bits and much graphic sex. (And sitting naked on rocks. Ouch.) It's also an eerie portrait of alienation and trust that unfolds after Franck (Pierre Deladonchamps) witnesses Michel (Christophe Paou) do something terrible but prefers to get closer rather than turn him in. The motivations may be questionable, but desire has a way of clouding even the clearest heads.

Stranger By the Lake

LOS ANGELES TIMES

Growing up Hollywood

Hailee Steinfeld's life evolves with her roles

Los Angeles Times

In the three years since earning an Oscar nomination at age 14 for her film debut in Joel and Ethan Coen's "True Grit," Hailee Steinfeld has had barely a moment to catch her breath.

Last year, she tackled sci-fi ("Ender's Game") and Shakespearean tragedy ("Romeo and Juliet"). And the 17-year-old high school junior has a cluster of films completed, including "3 Days to Kill." Penned by Luc Besson and Adi Hasak and directed by McG, the spy thriller-drama finds Steinfeld playing Zoey, the estranged teenage daughter of a dying CIA assassin (Kevin Costner).

Also in the pipeline for the actress, who lives with her family in Thousand Oaks, Calif., are the Toronto Film Festival fave "Can a Song Save Your Life?", Tommy Lee Jones' "The Homesman" and the action-comedy "Barely Lethal"—in this one, she's the assassin.

Jeff Bridges and Hailee Steinfeld in "True Grit"

So the Internet was abuzz last week with pictures of you smoking.

I did get a phone call from my dad after those pictures got out.

What did he say when you told him they were actually herbal cigarettes and the pictures were from the set of "Ten Thousand Saints"?

He's like, "It's all part of the game." I get it. It's cool. The movie, which involves ... smoking, drugs and alcohol, has been an interesting learning experience for me.

You also just worked with Tommy Lee Jones, who not only stars in but also directs "The Homesman."

That is a period piece. I don't know if it is sort of classified as a Western, but I play a very, very small part in it. I will say I don't think I have ever been more nervous in my life as I was when I was doing one scene with Tommy Lee Jones. I had, like, three lines and they wouldn't come out of my mouth. I get nervous about pretty much everything.

Really? Even when you were just 14 and going through the Academy Awards three years ago, you seemed unflappable.

The thing I find as I get older that I think, maybe, I get more nervous because I have become aware of what is actually happening. When I was 13 and shooting "True Grit" and when I was at the Oscars, I had no idea what I was getting myself into. It took me a very long time to realize just how incredibly special that entire time in my life was.

Is there a safe way to meet hookups?

Anna Pulley

• redeyedate.tribune.com
• @annapulley

Dear Anna,
I am a 45-year-old woman. I have come to a place in my life where I am perpetually single. While I continue to try to meet "someone," I am starting to think in a pragmatic way. I have physical needs. I have had one "buddy with benefits," but I found I got too attached and became needy. At this point I am looking for a way to get my physical needs met in a safe way (literally and emotionally). What is your advice? An escort service? Casual encounters? How do I do this and be safe? I think it'd be nice to have a more "professional" solution without getting attached or having too many expectations.

Dear reader,

"I'd advise against going on a casual encounters date," writer, podcast host and former escort Eric Barry said. "If you were looking for a random sexual encounter, it's possible this could meet your needs, but it sounds like you have more specific physical and emotional concerns you're hoping to confront."

As with every sexual encounter, nothing is 100 percent safe in terms of STI transmission, pregnancy or odds that the guy will want to show you his wicked skateboard sticker collection. Sex workers probably are safer than an anonymous Craigslist hookup since they tend to be far more vigilant about condoms and other barriers than your average dude. In general, it's far more dangerous to be a sex worker than to enlist the services of one.

But there isn't much research that focuses on straight male escorts, since there are so few. A few online resources exist, such as, if you can get past the terrible name, cowboy-s4angels.com. From what I can tell, they only feature about 50 men nationally, so if you don't live in a major city, your saddle might be left to shine itself.

"Because prostitution and sex work are illegal in most areas, there is little regulation to ensure the safety of the client and sex worker alike," Barry said. "Be sure to always use condoms, and if at any point you're not comfortable moving forward with the session, politely pay them for their time and tell them you're unable to continue."

You might also consider a sex surrogate or browse the back-page ads found in most alt-weeklies. If you want more of a new-agey vibe, there's sacrederos.com, a "directory of tantra, sensual massage, sexual healing and coaching professionals."

Barry notes that it's important to be able to "articulate what it is you're looking for and what your long-term goals are. Do you want to [bleep] on the first meeting? Would you prefer to just meet for coffee first? How comfortable are you with kissing and snuggling, etc.?"

Should you choose the more economical route, there are dozens of hookup sites and apps vying for attention. Craigslist is an option since it's fast, free and anonymous. If you do want to go the Casual Encounters route, use common sense—talk about STI history/the last time you both were tested, meet in a public place, have a "safe call" friend you can check in with and who knows where you are, etc.

Meeting a stranger online is just as risky as meeting a stranger offline. Take precautions when you can, trust your gut and have fun. You deserve it.

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Join the fan club, Lena Dunham! The "Girls" creator told Grantland that she'd love to guest-star on an episode of "Scandal" as, "like, a senator who did something wrong," vulture.com reports. Though she recognizes that she's probably not technically allowed to be on another show, we're still intrigued by this mashup of powerful women. We broke down the dossiers on Dunham's "Girls" character, Hannah Horvath, and "Scandal's" main lady, Olivia Pope, to see how they match up.

What happens when Hannah Horvath faces off against Olivia Pope?

Name: Hannah Horvath

Age: 25

Relationship status:
In a relationship

Residence: Decently nice apartment in Greenpoint, Brooklyn

Occupation: Writer

Drug of choice: Well, it was going to be cocaine, but probably PBR.

Likes: Cupcakes, rompers, shorty-shorts, Sun Chips, dancing

Dislikes: Running, making coffee, criticism, public singing

Name: Olivia Pope

Age: 34

Relationship status: Scandalous

Residence: Bugged apartment in Washington, D.C.

Occupation: Crisis manager

Drug of choice: Wine

Likes: Couch sweaters, popcorn, sneaky sexual encounters, coats, control

Dislikes: Mellie Grant, her father, being spied on, bright colors

“Ashley remembered my birthday, but I don't hold grudges against Mary-Kate forgetting mine.”

—“In Secret” star Elizabeth Olsen, on Andy Cohen’s “Watch What Happens Live,” on which of her two sisters is her favorite. She added: “I should have just said my brother!”

FEAR-SOME FOUR-SOME

Fantastic news! A cast has been announced for the Marvel Comics reboot of “Fantastic Four,” ew.com reports. Michael B. Jordan will play Johnny Storm/The Human Torch. Kate Mara has been tapped as Sue Storm/Invisible Girl. Miles Teller will be Dr. Reed Richards/Mister Fantastic and Jamie Bell steps in as Ben Grimm/The Thing. The flick is set for a June 19, 2015, release date.

Fashionista in training

Rihanna may be ruling the cover of Vogue's March issue, but Lorde is holding fashion court inside. The 17-year-old “Royals” singer and Grammy winner told the mag that she has preferred clothing that makes her feel “powerful and strong” since stepping into the spotlight, naming Comme des Garçons, Miu Miu, Moschino and Simone Rocha as her favorite labels, and Grace Jones and David Bowie as two of her fashion icons. Sounds like she’s headed in the right direction.

Boys' club

Megan Fox is a mom again! People magazine reports the “Transformers” star gave birth to her second son with husband Brian Austin Green on Feb. 12. Bodhi Ransom joins big brother Noah Shannon, born in 2012. Fox is starring as April in the new “Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles” flick, which will give her sons something pretty awesome to brag about when they’re older.

What's on her menu?

Jessica Biel has a brand-new role: restaurateur! The actress posted pics Tuesday on Instagram of sweet treats from Au Fudge, described by Page Six as “SoHo House for kids.” Soooo basically, Sarah Jessica Parker’s kids? The Santa Monica, Calif., eatery has yet to set an opening date, but we assume there’ll be a large line of real housewives of Beverly Hills squabbling over their strollers when it does.

HOT DATE
FEB. 22

That's when tickets go on sale for the 2014 edition of Bonnaroo. The fest announced its June 12-15 lineup on Thursday: such powerhouse acts as Kanye West, Jack White, Frank Ocean, Vampire Weekend, Lauryn Hill, Janelle Monae, Chance the Rapper, Hannibal Buress and Skrillex are set to perform. The purchasing madness starts at 11 a.m. Good luck.
